“Yale-NUS College will produce graduates with a broad multidisciplinary background, trained to think in depth about specific issues. We believe such graduates will add to the dynamism of the Public Service, especially in today’s fast-changing globalised environment. The Public Service Division has an agreement with Yale-NUS College to place some of their students in our premium internship programmes. We look forward to their joining the Public Service in the near future.”

Ms Lim Soo Hoon

Permanent Secretary, Public Service Division, Prime Minister’s Office, Singapore

“I am excited about the bold vision behind Yale-NUS College in Singapore. The principles and traditions of a liberal arts education form the core of a world-class higher education system. Students in our 21st-century global society need the skills of critical thinking, innovation, and communication that are best taught by a strong liberal arts education. This trailblazing international partnership will provide students with unique educational opportunities, and prepare them to be leaders, scholars, and citizens who give back to our society.”

Professor Henry T. Yang

Chancellor of the University of California Santa Barbara and Chairman of the Association of Pacific Rim Universities

“A university is a place that nurtures the mind and spirit at a time when one’s intellectual faculties and imaginative powers are most vibrant and curious. It is a microcosm of our world; an interdependent world where the increasingly fluid boundaries between East and West, North and South, Science and Art reflect the intertwining and redefining of realities in an age of globalisation. Yale-NUS College offers a holistic, interdisciplinary learning environment that fosters inquiry, critical thinking, creativity, and participation. A liberal arts education encourages students to be always open to the vast and various, sometimes contradictory, realms of human experience. This is the kind of learning that shapes mindful individuals, engaged citizens, and enlightened leaders who can navigate across diverse landscapes of knowledge and respond imaginatively to the challenges and opportunities of our time.”

Dr. Noeleen Heyzer

Under-Secretary-General of the United Nations and Executive Secretary of the United Nations Economic and Social Commission for Asia and the Pacific (UNESCAP)

“I expect that the graduates of Yale-NUS College will be in high demand by both local and multinational companies. Companies are particularly interested in individuals who can think holistically about a complex problem, identify the key issues, and address them rigorously. Having Yale-NUS College provide a new model of education that will nurture such graduates right here in Singapore is a really significant development.”

Stephen Lee

Chairman, Singapore Airlines
